

BROOKLYN NEWS.

SUFFERS FOR HIS FRIEND.

Genden, Who Got Tanner Out of Jail, Held.

He May Pay Dearly for His Clever Trickery.

Before Justice Haggerty, in the Myrtle Avenue Police Court, Brooklyn, this morning, Christopher Genden, a cigar dealer, of 98 Stagg street, entered a plea of not guilty to a charge of aiding and abetting in the escape of Burt Tanner from Raymond Street Jail. He refused to make any statement, and Justice Haggerty set the case for a hearing on Dec. 12.

Justice Haggerty also issued a warrant for the arrest of Tanner's wife, Annie, on a charge of complicity in the matter. The warrant was placed in the hands of Police Constable Campbell, of the Humboldt street station, and he will make the arrest some time to-day if the woman has not flown with her husband.

Tanner's escape was effected by a novel scheme. He was arrested on Oct. 25 while attempting to enter Liebmans' brew, brewery. He was held by Justice Watson to await the action of the Grand Jury, and was sent to Raymond Street Jail.

It was visitors' day at the jail yesterday. During the afternoon fully 200 persons called to see friends who were behind the bars. Shortly before 3 o'clock a pretty little woman, clad in black, presented herself before Clerk Stone and asked for a card to visit her husband, John Tanner. She was accompanied by a tall, good-looking man who proved to be Genden. They passed into the jail, and the keepers paid no more attention to them than to scores of other visitors.

A half hour afterwards Mrs. Tanner emerged from the jail. She was accompanied by a man who handed a visitor's card to Clerk Smith, and the pair, after thanking the officers for their courtesy, left the jail old building.

A few minutes after 4 o'clock a man emerged upon the scene and told him that he had lost his card of admission.

"If you haven't got your ticket you'll have to stay here over night," said the clerk. The visitor searched his clothing and, finally, declared that he had lost his ticket.

One of the keepers who chanced to overhear the conversation recognized the man as Mrs. Tanner's companion. Tanner's cell was visited, and his absence was discovered. Genden had given his card to the man, and the latter had walked out of the jail without being questioned.

Genden saw that he was caught and he admitted the facts. He was taken to an hour the better of the start, and you can't catch him now," said Genden.

Genden was a man of about thirty years, and he said that Mrs. Tanner lived in his house. He was locked up in the De Kalb avenue station.

Supt. Campbell has detailed several detectives to look for Tanner, and the police in all sections of the city have been asked to watch for him. Tanner is a young man, of medium build, and has a sandy mustache.

The officials at the jail say that there were more visitors yesterday than usual, and that it was impossible to keep track of every person who entered.

HE WILL NOT GO TO CHICAGO.

Erickson Arrested on Charges Made by Ida Johnson.

Ought as He Was Leaving with His Wife for the West.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Erickson, of 154 Laquer street, Brooklyn, are not en route for Chicago to-day, as they anticipated they would be. Erickson was in the Butler Street Police Court, Brooklyn, instead at the instance of Ida Johnson, of 355 Furman street.

Ida charges Erickson with betraying her under promise of marriage. She obtained a warrant for his arrest on Saturday. Policemen Reilly and Campbell found Erickson at his home last night, packing their trunks, preparatory to their departure for the West to-day.

Miss Johnson is about twenty-three years old. She is a pretty little woman, and was attractively dressed this morning when she appeared before Judge Tilden.

Erickson is about twenty-five years old. His wife is about Miss Johnson's age. She is a very pretty woman, and is a native of Sweden. In telling her story to an "Evening World" reporter this morning, she said:

"I regret very much that I am compelled to appear against Eddie. We have been fast friends for years. He has wronged me awfully.

"I have known him ever since we were children in Sweden. I came to America several years ago with my two brothers. Eddie was a short time and then came to me some time ago. He stopped with us a short time and then went to the West. He remained in the West until six months ago, when he came back to Brooklyn, and made his home with us.

"As children we were very close, and he renewed the pledges of our childhood days. Eddie had promised to marry me time and time again.

"About three weeks ago he ceased to come home. I thought he was on a business trip, but he never returned. I watched him and found he was paying too much attention to one Emma Anderson. Before I could do anything they were married."

Judge Tilden held Erickson to await examination next week. The matter in the meantime will be investigated by the Charities Commission.

Erickson had nothing to say this morning.
